UNHAPPY REBELS.

Pollard, the Biographer, wishes to examine the Public Archives—He is Refused.

The following correspondence explains itself:—

To the Secretary of War:—New York, Nov. 2, 1868.—Sir:—I had applied to the State Department for permission to examine the "Rebel Archives" in Washington City, to verify a historical work I am now composing—"Life of Jefferson Davis." Understanding these archives are within the control of your Department, I now direct my application to you, begging to call your attention to the consideration that I desire to examine these archives purely in the way of a historical inquiry; that the object of their collection at the public expense is supposed to have been for historical aid, and thus consists with and supports no political end, and that I have already been examined, as I understand, through permission of the Government, by writers on the Northern side, among them a biographer of General Grant. In view of these considerations, I hope you will grant me a permission sought; especially as I can conceive no ground for distinction as between different writers, if the object and value of these archives is historical—and what other object or value they can have, I have no time to imagine.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant, EDWARD A. POLLARD.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, NOV. 14, 1868.—Edward A. Pollard, Esq.:—Sir:—You are respectfully informed that your application of the 21st inst. for permission to examine certain archives in possession of this Department, has not been favorably considered by the Secretary of War.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, Assistant Adjutant-General.

The above correspondence sounds an appeal to public opinion. Despotism is not less reprehensible because the occasion is small and the immediate application is but to a single person; for it is the principle and not the extent of the circumstances that is to be considered. It may, in some sense, be but a small matter that a Southern writer has been refused access to a bureau of information; and, indeed, it is but a little practical consequence, since I may say, without presumption, that I possess more of the secret history of the Southern Confederacy protected from legal processes than the Government at Washington should be able to obtain, and may further express the opinion that I wish to examine the "Rebel Archives," not to acquire facts, but to obtain some formal vouchers, which would have been useful as references in my book. So far, the matter is of but little importance. But it is a matter of great consequence—one that interests every citizen in the land—that a writer should have been debarred from a bureau having the same relation to the public as the government library or museum—it can certainly have none other, simply and solely on the ground that he was a Southerner, or that he intended to write on the Southern side of a historical question.

Briefly, decisively, there is no other ground, because it is known that the writer is a biographer or eulogist of General Grant, was recently allowed unlimited access to these archives.

There is thus no escape from the conclusion that I was denied, because I was a Southerner, or because my men happened to be disinterested to the powers that be.

Now, I am a citizen of the United States, accepting all obligations as such, bound to the government by every oath and ceremony it has imposed since the war, and I demand the same rights as any other citizen, no matter what his nativity or his opinions or his pursuits. I do not understand the meaning of an inferior citizenship, and if such anomaly is to be applied to Southern writers, then our Government is a despotism, for it is the inequality of rights, rather than the rigor of common laws, which makes the despotism.

The bureau which contains the papers referred to was established for the public expense, and for public objects. It was designed as a treasury of history, not as a curiosity shop of old papers to support sinecures and cobwebs.

The next step may be to exclude "unhappy Rebels" from the Congressional Library, the Smithsonian Institute, and indeed from all the public bounties of literature and art.

This, we repeat, may be a small matter in the estimation of some. Any how, it has been large enough to detain the Secretary of War in incalculable for several weeks. But, indeed, it is small in some respects, and the paltriness of the occasion makes it quite as contemptible as the magnitude of the principle renders it criminal.

DISASTER.

The Brooklyn Fire—One Man Killed and Another Wounded.

Another disastrous fire, says the New York Herald of this morning, and this time, unfortunately, attended with loss of life, is to be added to the number which have recently occurred in Brooklyn.

Last Friday night a grain elevator was destroyed at the Atlantic dock, involving a loss of $50,000. On Sunday night Harvey's oilcloth manufactory in Bezer's street was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $55,000. On Monday a row of small frame houses on Fulton avenue was burned, the loss on which is estimated at $25,000. The last and most destructive fire occurred at half past 4 o'clock yesterday morning, two large brick buildings, Nos. 199 and 201 Water street, between Bridge and Gold streets, being destroyed, and the loss to the amount of about $100,000. This makes about $210,000 worth of property destroyed in Brooklyn during the past week.

The most lamentable part of the occurrence yesterday was the terrible accident which happened to two of the members of Truck Company No. 7, named George Boyhart and John Yerks. During the progress of the fire in Water street, the two men went around to the rear of the burning building, which is Nos. 197 and 199 Plymouth street, and were considering the propriety of putting ladders up to the second story. Before they had time to do anything, however, the upper portion of the wall fell upon them and they were buried beneath a large mass of bricks, plaster, and other debris. Both the firemen and police set to work and the unfortunate men were rescued from the ruins; but Boyhart was shockingly mutilated and he was unable to speak, and his condition was also injured internally. The injured men were removed to a neighboring drug store, where Boyhart's injuries were pronounced to be fatal. Yerks, for his skull was fractured and his ribs were cracked in. The police of the Forty-second precinct started with him to the residence of his sister, in High street, but while on the way thither he expired. Yerks was conveyed to the residence of his parents, at the corner of Pearl and Prospect streets. To the members of the police force under Captain Jacobs, of the Forty-second precinct, and to the firemen who perished their lives in rescuing the unfortunate men, much credit is due. No danger was anticipated at the time the accident occurred, from the fact that there was no fire in the portion of the building on Plymouth street. The wall, it is believed, was pressed out by the large quantity of steam which generated in the building.

NATURE'S GREAT ALLY.—It took the world nearly two thousand years to discover and remedy one of the most fatal errors that mankind has ever believed in. From the time of Galen to a comparatively very recent date, it was supposed that, in order to cure a disease, it was necessary to weaken the already enfeebled patient by artificial means. Bleeding, blistering, violent purgation and salivation were the main reliance of the faculty, not more than fifty years ago. Restoratives were only administered as supplementary agents, after the lancet, cantharides, jalap, and calomel had done their deplicting work. Modern science has effected a salutary reform in medical treatment. In place of the nauseous doses once administered in cases of indigestion, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, nervousness, internal test fever, etc., Hostetter's STOMACH BITTERS are now given with the utmost confidence and the happiest results. The reason why this admirable botanical preparation has superseded the ecruated poisons of the old materia medica is that it combines the properties of a wholesome tonic with those of a gentle cathartic, an anti-bilious agent, a nerve and a blood depurative. Thus, while it keeps the bowels free, regulates the liver and purifies the current of the blood, it sustains the physical strength of the invalid, and by this means the expulsion of disease and the restoration of constitutional vigor go on together.

At this season, when intermittent and remittent fevers, with other complaints arising from a damp mephitic atmosphere are prevalent, a course of the BITTERS is the best means of protecting the system from attack.

FINE FRENCH Calf Boots and Gaiters.—The man who has never experienced the pleasure of wearing a pair of boots made by William H. Helweg, is to some extent an object of commiseration. We speak knowingly, having worn Helweg's boots for years. Their comfort, however, is not their only recommendation, as they are made of the best material and in the very best manner. Helweg will not employ an incompetent workman; therefore his work is always first-class. His store and factory is at No. 535 Arch Street, next to the corner of Sixth.
